

This painting was created in 1732 by Balthasar Denner in Germany. It is called "The Coffee Giver." The girl in the portrait is probably Denner's oldest daughter, Catharina. Denner added small, important details to his work, like painting the steam coming off the coffee or little puddles of spilled coffee around the saucer.

Make sure you gild the frame! Gilding is the act of covering something in a thin layer of gold or silver. On frames, the gilding reflected light adding to the drama of the piece and reflecting the candlelight. #2020.9
